BRIAN ZUCKERMAN NAMED CHIEF OF STAFF AND LEGAL COUNSEL AT SALUS UNIVERSITY

Elkins Park, Pa. – Brian Zuckerman has been named chief of staff and in-house legal counsel at Salus University. Salus is internationally recognized for its wide range of graduate, professional degree and post-graduate residency programs for healthcare professionals.

In this position, Zuckerman will provide legal representation and counsel to the University, and will oversee daily operations with a focus on program growth and strategic planning. In addition, he will advise members of the administration, faculty and staff on issues including litigation, employment and student issues, real estate, contracts, environmental issues, and government regulation. Previously, he served as senior vice president - general counsel and secretary for Pep Boys in Philadelphia, where he was responsible for the management and oversight of legal and environmental affairs, external communications, internal audit and risk management.

Zuckerman, an adjunct professor at Penn Law, is a member of the Association of Corporate Counsel and serves as a volunteer for the Homeless Advocacy Project, providing pro bono and community service for those in need. He earned a Juris Doctor (JD) degree from Temple University James E. Beasley School of Law.

“We welcome Brian to the Salus team,” said University President Michael H. Mittelman. “He brings considerable leadership experience to the University, and will play an integral role in developing and maintaining solid relationships with internal and external constituencies.”
