Salus University Students Host Contactless Food Drive

Elkins Park, Pa. — Salus University Osborne College of Audiology (OCA) students hosted a contactless food drive June 12 at the main campus in Elkins Park to benefit Face to Face, a Germantown nonprofit organization that offers free human services to more than 2,500 low income and homeless individuals each year. Faculty and students including (from left) Holly Forst '22AUD, of New Britain, Pa.; Meghan Westman '22AUD, of Sayville, N.Y.; Nina Grant '22AUD, of Andover, Mass.; and Jordan Hennessee '22AUD, of Jenkintown, Pa., wearing masks and maintaining social distance, coordinated the event to help people in the Germantown community during a time of increased food insecurity caused by the coronavirus pandemic. Prepared boxes of donations stocked with non-perishable food items were placed in the students' trunks for delivery to the nonprofit. For more information about COVID-19 relief efforts offered by Face to Face, visit www.facetofacegermantown.org.
