1. Right to a Professional Learning Environment: University premises are the essential learning environments of the University. As such, the freedom to learn in these environments should be promoted and encouraged by instructors. Students shall have the right to:
 - a. Have access to faculty, academic technology, classrooms, the Learning Resource Center; presentations, and other resources necessary for the learning process.
 - b. Have access to academic advising and clear expectations for degree and graduation requirements.

- c. Have decisions related to the pursuit of their education made in a clear manner.
- d. Learn in an environment that supports the freedom of self-expression and association.
- e. Be free of conduct that impedes either the faculty member's ability to teach or the student's ability to learn.
- f. Receive a syllabus in a timely manner.
- g. Expect to interact with faculty who act professionally; provide clear expectations for class performance and evaluation; hold classes as scheduled; are accessible for office hours, appointments or consultation; and maintain a clear connection between course description and content.
- h. Expect a faculty member to be sensitive to the student's religious beliefs and observances, including an expectation that faculty members will make reasonable arrangements upon notice that the student must miss an exam or other academic exercise resulting from the observance of a religious holiday.
- i. Have the freedom to raise relevant issues pertaining to classroom discussion (including personal beliefs), offer reasonable doubts about data presented, and express alternative opinions without concern for any academic penalty. Students have the right to expect that their work will be evaluated by academic standards alone.
- j. Study, work, and interact in an environment of professionalism and of mutual trust and respect that is free of amorous or sexual advances by a faculty member. All amorous or sexual relationships between faculty members and students are unacceptable when the faculty member has any professional responsibility for the student, even when both parties have consented or appear to have consented to the relationship. Such professional responsibility encompasses both instructional and non-instructional contexts. A faculty member shall not have an amorous or sexual relationship, consensual or otherwise, with a student who is enrolled in a course being taught by the faculty member or whose performance is being supervised or evaluated by the faculty member. A faculty member should be careful to distance himself or herself from any decisions that may reward or penalize a student with whom he or she has or has had an amorous or sexual relationship, even outside the instructional context, especially when the faculty member and student are in the same academic unit or in units that are allied academically.

4. Right to Information: The University shall make available to all students information which denotes the applicable academic and behavioral standards.
5. Right to Student Records: Students' academic records shall be maintained, and students shall have access to their academic records, in a manner consistent with University policy and applicable state and federal laws.

8. Right to Due Process: A student subject to disciplinary action arising from violations of university policies shall be assured procedural due process. At the discipline hearings, an accused student shall be assumed innocent until found responsible, and in the initial hearing, the burden of proof shall rest with those bringing the charges.
